The World's Opinion Page

Project Syndicate* was established in the early 1990s as an initiative to assist newly independent media in post-communist Central and Eastern Europe. Expansion to Western Europe, Africa, Asia, and the Americas quickly followed, as publishers worldwide sought access to the views of leading thinkers and policymakers on the day's most important global issues.

Our rapid growth has been guided by rigorous editorial independence and a simple credo: all people – wherever they live, whatever their income, and whatever language they use – deserve equal access to the highest-quality analysis, from a broad range of perspectives, of the events, trends, and forces shaping their lives.

Project Syndicate thus provides an invaluable global public good: ensuring that news media in all countries, regardless of their financial and journalistic resources – and often in challenging political environments – can offer readers original, engaging, and thought-provoking commentaries by the world's leading innovators in economics and finance, politics, health, technology, and culture.

In fact, without Project Syndicate, most of the publications we serve would be unable to secure comparable content. Project Syndicate's unparalleled range and caliber of opinion, our ability to provide analysis of breaking news, and our commitment to focusing minds on complex topics driving the news – from development to sustainability, among many others – now benefits some 300 million readers of more than 500 media outlets in over 150 countries.

Our Reach

Project Syndicate constitutes the only truly global forum for informed, high-level debate on the world's most urgent policy challenges. Our media partners include the world's most influential agenda-setters in both the developed and emerging worlds.
